If there was one thing I learned in speaking with women the country over, it was the universality of "dry skin." It made no difference whether she lived in New York, Miami, Chicago, Vancouver or Southern California—the first question I was always asked was—"What can I do for dry skin?"

I believe most women are rather fully aware of the result of this condition. Premature lines of face and neck, sallow coloring, as well as the drawing discomfort are the usual indications. It is generally the woman with a thin, sensitive skin who is most apt to show this premature lining.

General Conditions
Now, before we look for the remedy, let us examine the cause. Dry skin is an indication of any of a number of conditions. It may be due to the diminishing of natural oil because of age. It may occur from too much exposure to sun, salt air, or the elements in general. It may come from a diet deficiency, allergy or illness.

Any one of these conditions or any combination can result in this common dryness of skin. Neither age nor geography is the sole cause.

Do's and Don'ts
Here are some simple do's and don'ts to follow.

Don't use soap and water on dry, sensitive skin. The hard water and soap content play havoc with the dry sensitive skin. Instead, a cleansing cream is far more satisfactory in removing dust and make-up without disturbing the skin's natural oil balance. It is also helps to smooth and to soften the skin. A skin lotion should always be used following the cleansing cream. Not only does it serve to remove residual traces of the cream, but it will do much to stimulate the skin locally and is an important factor in helping refine the skin's appearance.

Avoid unnecessary exposure to the sun. One of the most harmful fads adopted in recent years has been this matter of sun-worship. These sun-worshippers have literally baked their bodies crisp brown and in many instances have denuded themselves of essential natural oils, something many will regret as time goes on.

Diet
In the matter of a diet deficiency causing oil shortage, it is best not to be your own doctor. See a good nutritionist or dermatologist as to the diet most helpful in your case.

Of all skin conditioners on the market today, I have found one which solves the problem quickly, effectively and economically.

This product contains an active blend of STEROLS—found in lanolin and other sources—which are counterparts of those oils nature uses to keep our skin in condition. It is both a skin cleanser and conditioner. It is so light in texture that it literally seeps into dry skin, leaving it dewy fresh with no sticky residue.

Used religiously this treatment should show satisfactory results in ten days, regardless of skin condition.
